

Quality Payment Program in Small Group Practices: Picking Quality Measures and Improvement Activities for MIPS Reporting

Upcoming Web Event

To be eligible for an incentive payment, clinicians in small group practices will need to report quality measures and quality improvement activities for 2017. Choosing quality measures and quality improvement activities to report is something you'll need to do very soon. This webinar will pool the advice from quality improvement advisors that spend hours every day supporting small group practices preparing for the transition to MIPS. You'll learn strategies for choosing your quality measures and maximize your MIPS score. You'll get guidance on how to choose which quality improvement activities to report and on what it means to "attest" to participating in them. And you'll have an opportunity to ask questions of these experts and your peers about the specific challenges you're working through as you prepare to succeed in MIPS.

This event is designed for:

- Clinicians participating in small group practices
- Practice managers from small group practices
- Persons assisting small group practices in the 2017 transition year
- Clinicians from small group practices unsure whether they need to participate in MIPS

Participants will learn:

- How to evaluate the pros and cons of choosing particular quality measures
- Whether reporting on your best measures or all your available measures is better strategy
- How to "attest" to participating in quality improvement activities
- What to do if you haven't picked quality measures or begun improvement activities yet
- Where to find FREE technical assistance and other resources to help make decisions about your quality measures or improvement activities
